Auditorium-Gymnasium

Our school and community became aware of a dream come true when construction of the new gymnasium-auditorium building was at last completed in the 1953-54 school year.

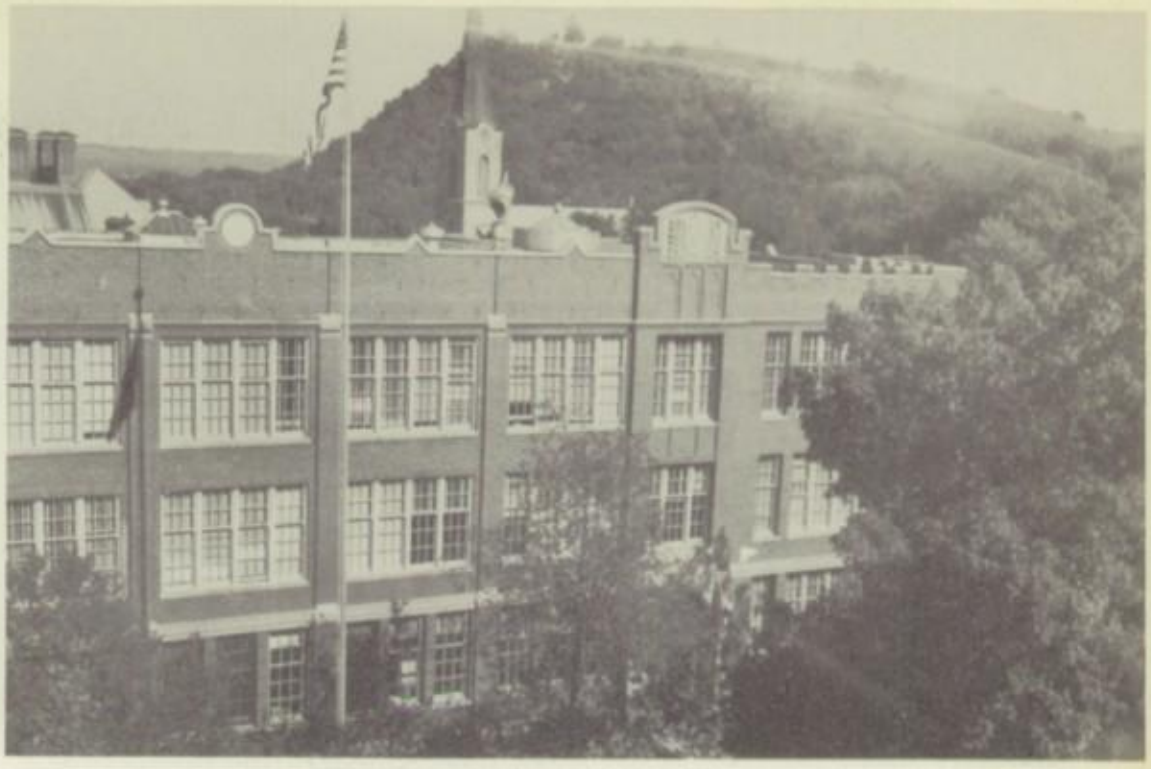
Central's addition is an imposing one with it's modern construction and it's eye-catching curved front.

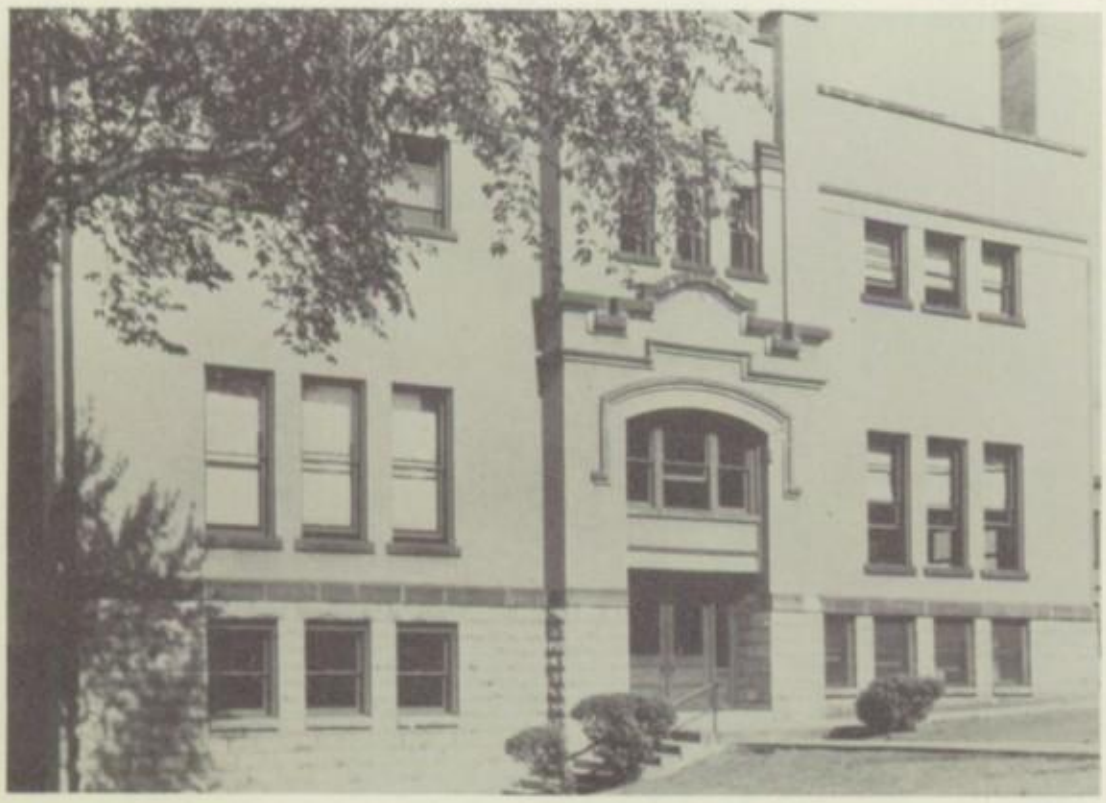
The mass of windows facing the street are the only ones in the block-long structure, and a modern air-conditioner provides ideal temperature for the interior.

Along with a combination gymnasium-auditorium, the new building sports a drying room for athletic equipment, several locker rooms, physical education offices equipped with showers, and several mirrored dressing rooms. In addition to complete physical education and dramatic facilities, the recently constructed addition also houses a spacious cafeteria, teacher's dining room, and a food storage room. Band and choir sessions are held on the second floor of the fire-proof structure. Also located on this floor are several instrument storage rooms and eight practice rooms which are shared by the band and choir members. Not to be overlooked because of the massiveness of the building are some of the smaller features such as the tan lockers which are built into the walls, and the beauty of the stone and marble in the spacious foyer. Accoustical tile ceilings are installed in most of the class rooms making a lighter and more cheerful room. The latest in architectural and functional details, down to the attractive and numerous drinking fountains, add to Central's pride of possession in the new building.

Central Building

In this main building of Central High School are located offices of the administration, classrooms, the library and study hall.





Industrial Building

This building houses the industrial arts, home economics, business departments of our school, and the old gymnasium.

Bulletins, maps, and letters add interest to the teachers' day as we see from the faces of Mary St. Anthony, Juneau Johnson and Myrtle Anderson, as they collect their morning mail in the Superintendent's office.

Examining the dusty-rose upholstered seats of the newly completed auditorium-gymnasium, are Superintendent of Schools, L. M. Wikre, and school board members, Lael Yaggy and Wayne Loomis.

This section of the building was completed for the opening game of the 1953-54 basketball season.

Coffee, cookies, rolls and chatter highlight the weekly faculty coffee party.

Stacy Olson, Louis Ode, Mary Campion and Thora Hoghaug are pictured enjoying a typical Wednesday snack time.

Two committees, serving and clean-up, are in operation every Wednesday at the parties held in the faculty room.

Administration

Representing the people of the community in the direction of school affairs, the board of education has the responsibility of establishing rules and regulations for the operation of the school. The major achievement of the board during the 1953-54 school year was bringing about the completion of the gymnasium-auditorium addition and establishing a long range plan to finance school building projects in Red Wing.

L. M. Wikre

Superintendent of Schools

The responsibility for administering the rules and regulations of the board of education in the schools is the major task of Superintendent of Schools L. M. Wikre. At the same time he has provided the professional educator's advice for the board, and leadership for the staff of the school.

The major enterprise of the year for the superintendent was realized when the new high school gymnasium-auditorium was placed in use.

The consequent enlargement and enrichment of the curricular and co-curricular activities have largely been the result of the leadership of Superintendent Wikre throughout the year.

Serving as head of the administration department of the high school is Leo W. Anderson, who has held the position of principal since 1947. His friendly cooperative attitude has made him well liked among students at Central.

The major achievement of the year was Mr. Anderson's cooperative effort with the Superintendent in the arrangement for the expanded physical education program and in the operation of the new gymnasium-auditorium.

Coordination of the high school curriculum and student activities in the year were made possible through Mr. Anderson's high school staff meetings and frequent contacts with the student council.

The beginning of the school year found Miss M. E. Splittstoesser, just returned from a summer long European tour, at her usual desk in the room labeled "Assistant Principal's office, enjoying her job. The task of signing make up slips, tardy slips, giving advice in senior interviews, listening to the woes and excuses of bewildered newcomers and perpetual latecomers, is performed by Miss Splittstoesser with the efficient and understanding manner that makes her known to all Centralites. Along with this, is the major assistance and cooperation given to Mr. Anderson in the operation of the daily class and activity program.

Make-up slips, permits to leave the building, tardy slips, and detention are among the reasons nearly every student has, at some time or another in their high school career, entered Miss Splittstoesser's office.

Enjoying a few minutes of relaxation in the "innersanctum" during a busy day are Maurice Wohler, Robert Wallace, Ralph Galchutt and Myron Smith. This favorite smoker is located in the basement of the Central Building.

Faculty

We all teach and learn all of our lives. Teaching is not confined to parents and to professional teachers. In every business and industry, there are learners and teachers. Wherever there are beginners and experts, young and old, there is some kind of learning going on, and some sort of teaching.

The best known kind of teaching, and the most highly organized is present in the public school system. This is made possible through the professional and academic training of individuals. All of Central's teachers have achieved this training with a bachelors degree and many have additional training and higher degrees.

In their daily work with the students, they have exercised the patience, and offered the understanding, necessary in teaching.

In the classroom, Central's teachers have striven to make clear the knowledge and skills of the subject which they are teaching.

At the same time, all of Central's students have become aware of the high sense of responsibility that they have encountered in the teachers of the school. This responsibility is shown by the efforts that each teacher has made in an attempt to do the best for each individual student at Central. The responsibility has also been shown by the many long hours put in while preparing for classes and co-curricular activities.

The students believe that the teachers enjoy their work at Central, not only in their classrooms and extra-curricular activities, but also in their few moments of relaxation.

Engineers: Swanson, Kull.

Senior Student Council

Carol Meyer
President

Marlys Ottem
Vice-President

Central's student representative governing body, the Senior Student Council, headed by Carol Meyer has completed a very successful year. Their principle objective has been to promote better student-faculty relations.

Homecoming arrangements, the Free Farm Frolic, and the annual Amateur Show are the major social events sponsored by the council.

Some of the services of the group have been supervising after school detention periods, attempting to solve traffic problems in the halls and on the stairways, and the weekly apple sales.

Becky Hartley
Secretary

James Hallquist
Treasurer

One of the duties of the Student Council is to keep the trophies polished. Ruth Hanson and Lois Mock are seen admiring them.

Joan Thompson, Marlys Ottem, Lois Lind, and Val Peterson, all senior class council representatives discuss the prominent bulletin board on the second floor of the Central building.

Row 1: Thompson, Bodelson, Lind, Hallquist, Ottem. Row 2: Zetterberg, Olson, Eide, H. Anderson, Hawkenson, Peterson, B. Anderson, Kasa.

The council raised funds for it's activities through apple sales held in the halls every Wednesday.

Chairman Stan Vogel discusses another council project, detention supervision, with members Johnson and Ullrich.

Junior Student Council

Keeping order in the bicycle park are council members John Juers, Steven Malnar, and Steven Freier.

Junior student council officers are John Juers, treasurer; Steven Malnar, vice-president; Dick Aadalen, president; Hope Schendel, secretary.

Harriet Redding, Lorraine Diercks, June Downey, and Betty Schaffer are shown making last minute preparations for English in room 204. Who said seniors don't study?

General before-class chatter ranks high with Tom Kosec, Tom Hartery, Willis Buck, and Steve Thermos. These boys are just a few of the students that meet every morning in the study hall.

"Marlene, may I use the phone?" questions Reynold Diercks, as Phyllis Johnson waits patiently for her turn. Thomas Gerdes asks, "Is Mr. Anderson in?"

When we, the seniors of 1954, entered Central in the seventh grade we embarked upon a business adventure that we hoped would result in a growing and profitable education. As nearly everyone feels when he begins something new and different, we, would-be seniors, were a little frightened when we began our six year venture. We spent the first year in getting acquainted with many of the means that could lead us to a profitable end.

One of the first unexpected things we learned was that we would have to put in extra hours at home if our educational venture was to prove to be as profitable as it might. We were introduced to such things as grammar, notebooks, book reports, and themes that were to become a familiar part of our classroom sessions that year.

Showing an apparent quality of ambition we, as eighth graders, were the first class to organize a junior high dramatic club.

Junior high parties and dances gave us our first taste of social activities in that second year. We were eager to begin our freshman year and we greeted it with a feeling of great things yet to come. Even though we were spellbound with the idea of sometime becoming seniors, and even though we did feel like the green freshmen we were supposed to be, we couldn't suppress a feeling of great advancement when we were asked to guide future freshmen through the rooms and halls of Central.

The freshman homecoming dance was a strange and wonderful ball to our inexperienced eyes and words couldn't explain the excitement felt by some who had their first formal date that night. Algebra, Ivanhoe, Latin, and shop projects together with grammar, notebooks, book reports, and themes which showed up again, kept us busy in our classes.

It become apparent in our sophomore year that some students felt that their educational venture was not successful, for a great number of them dropped out of school that year and the year that followed.

For those of us who decided to continue seeking that growing and profitable education, there was much knowledge to be acquired. During the year that we were at last a part of the senior high, we became thoroughly acquainted with Julius Caesar in Latin, English and social, kept the prize notebook of our six year career in connection with biology studies, and took part in musical activities.

In our junior year we became aware of the fact that while we were growing older in appearance, our Central was becoming newer and newer in it's appearance.

At last we were sophisticated seniors who were supposed to set the examples, and the class that was supposed to uphold the dignity and principles of Central and, as classes before us, we did our best. Highlighting the year was completion of the new auditorium-gymnasium, that somehow just didn't seem to fit into our school, although it was a thrill to watch basketball games in it, with our classmates playing--a thrill that will long be remembered. Then, suddenly it was over and once again we were faced with feelings of expectancy and bigger things yet to come in some future venture.

Eighth Grade

Central's eighth grade mathematicians are quietly concentrating on mathematical definitions during the sixth hour.

The class of 1959 felt they made themselves well established in the life at Central high school this year with their move to second floor as a symbol of the progress.

They have learned to use the five minutes between classes with greater depth, and are surprised to find that they now recognize a few seniors when they see them in the halls.

In the social course of life, the eighth grade held two class parties which proved to be good "get acquainted" gatherings if nothing else.

At Christmas time, they proved they will be ready and capable to fill the senior choir positions, come the 1956-1957 school term, when they performed at the Christmas concert.

As a climax to their busy year, the eighth graders were torn from the planned subject programs and given their first taste at choosing their own curriculum for the ninth grade.

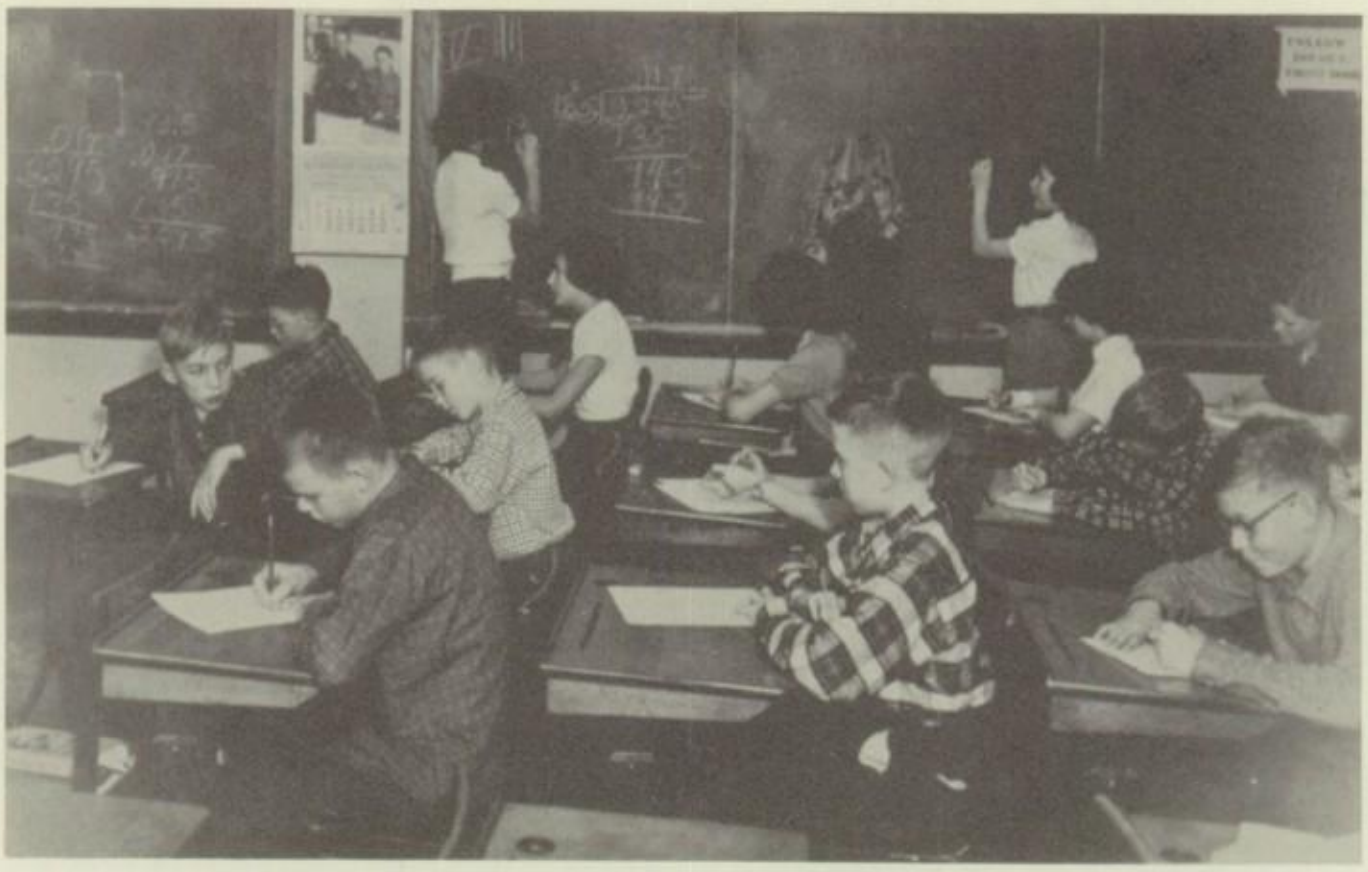
Seventh Grade



Problems of decimal division are being solved by members of Miss Benson's seventh grade math class.

Looking as unorganized and bewildered as they obviously are, the seventh graders made their debut at Central as the class of 1960.

To some students, it may take just a year to get over the shock of hour long classes, homework, and the general rush of activities; others may adjust themselves by the time they get into senior high, but there will always be some who will never get over their bewilderment.

The general rule of most seventh graders is to get wherever they are going in a hurry. They can nearly always be seen rushing up and down the stairs and tearing through the halls to get to their classes.

Enthusiasm and eagerness are shown as the class members participate in the many extra-curricular activities offered them.

Concentrating on their latest assignment in true reporter-fashion are senior journalists, Anita Carlson, Marlene Mumford, Jeanette Lundberg, Marlys Edstrom and Pat McCusker.

Last minute vocal-cord testing and word reviewing in preparation for the Christmas Choir Concert seem to be in order for vocalists Bud McCarty, Lois Lind, Linda Eckblad, Kathryn Simpson, and Homer Hauke.

Assisting in the high school office is a voluntary assignment of many senior high girls. Collecting attendance slips and doing the office messenger work are the most common tasks of the hour. Sharon Longcor, Betty Tiedeman, and Janice Lemmerman are shown working during the sixth hour.

Activities

Mary Ann Borgen, Mary Ann Jenkins, co-editors; Jeanne Loer, business manager; standing: Joe Lantz, Tom Hartery, sports editors.

Chieftain

"It's a feminine world" was illustrated by the fact that again this year, the Chieftain was co-edited by feminine editors. Handling the publication of ten issues of the paper were Mary Ann Jenkins and Mary Ann Borgen, who were assisted by members of the journalism classes. Serving as business manager for the Chieftain was Jeanne Loer whose chief tasks were to arrange the new locker distribution system and mail out exchanges.

Joe Lantz and Tom Hartery served as sports editors.

All school happenings of public interest were written by the press bureau for publication in the local newspaper. Press bureau duties were rotated through the year in order that more students might have an opportunity to learn this type of news writing.

Carol Eckblad, typist.

Jack Mossberg, Lavonne Stachele, Pat McCusker, Marlys Edstrom, Jeanette Lundberg, all members of Journalism II.

Val Peterson, Rita Peters, Beverly Peterson, Dorothy Tousley.

The presentation of the story of how Central and its inhabitants looked to the Feather editors during the year is in this book. The pleasures and satisfactions of the year, and this task, along with the tragedies and disappointments are not pictured. These intangibles must arise in the mind of the reader of the book.

A Band

The largest band in Central's history marched during halves at football games, appeared at the St. Paul Winter Carnival, and took part in the Memorial Day Parade.

They added life to pep-fests and homecoming with their stirring marches, while the band's various ensembles played for many local organizations. During the year the band presented two concerts with the choir in addition to their annual winter concert which was given in the new high school auditorium. The highlights of these concerts were recorded and played back over the air on radio station KAAA.

Nine of our band members traveled to Owatonna to play in the Big 9 select band, while the entire band made a trip to Austin for the Big Nine Music Festival.

The past year also saw the band move into a spacious new band room, and take their bi-annual trip to South Dakota.

Choir

With a final pat, the black folders are put away for the last time, empty, but holding memories of wonderful music. The blending of voices brought enjoyment and a feeling of unity to the choristers.

Combining the fall concert with the band, the choir opened its season singing both serious and light numbers.

Highlighting the year was the choir's trip to Minneapolis to sing before the Minnesota Music Educator's Association. They showed their ability by mastering some difficult and inspiring selections.

The performance at graduation ended a year made memorable by music.

The Christmas concert of 1953 was the second to be held with the mass chorus of 300 voices participating.

The secular side of the concert was brought forward when the choir told in music, "Twas the Night Before Christmas." To end the program, the choir rendered the beauteous strains of the "Hallelujah Chorus".

In their concerts this winter, the choir had the opportunity to present numbers built around Central's piano artist, Kathryn Simpson. Kathryn, the first place winner of the Chicago Musicland summer festival, is the regular accompanist of the choir.

"A Musical Christmas Card" was the theme that the Music and Drama departments elaborated on for the Christmas program. This photo shows one of the Nativity scenes portrayed by the speech class directed by Mr. Rowe Million.

G. A. A.

Energy and ambition are the qualities attributed to an enthusiastic GAAer.

During the 1953-54 season, dancing was given a place as a major club activity, thus bringing new interest to the organization.

The evening supper hike to Sorin's bluff was in great contrast to the annual installation banquet held on February 16, but both proved to be highlights of the year.

The job of these four people, Robert Zibble, Nancy Johnson, Merle Ratz and Shirley Luzaich, has been to take attendance at all assemblies and programs.

Service

Audio-visual help

Merle Paine, Steve Thermos, Vere Vance and Fred Ottem have been this years audio-visual "handy-men", a duty that has been well performed.

Door Monitors

The thankless task of persuading students that they must remain outside during the noon hour is the job of these six girls of the junior high who guard Central's portals.

Nurses Help

The backing for Miss Stoland's excellent memory comes in the card file and health records of Central's students kept in her office by her helpers, Pat Koester and Rita Schmitz.

Organizations

Student Bookkeepers

There are a lot of difficult tasks performed around Central by students every year without the reward of credit or cash. High on the list is the task performed by Gwenyth Eldred and Harriet Redding, student bookkeepers for activity funds.

Traffic Squad

The school patrol has almost become traditional, but its service is effective and necessary. Eight boys under the direction of science teacher Juneau Johnson, perform these duties.

Library Clubs

The heart of any good school system, the library, requires willing and able service from students assisting the librarian. Gwen Drewianka, Ardis Esterby, Phyllis Johnson, Carol Sammelson, and Marlene Anderson assist from the senior high.

Assisting Miss Wittich during their spare time are eight girls from the junior high. The girls who are active are;

Senior Discussion Club

There are thousands of words hurled around the halls of Central every day, most of it unorganized. A group that meets every Wednesday noon in room 306 of Central does plan their talk. Discussion club topics this year ranged all the way from how to get oriented at Central to the best methods of combatting subversion in government. The weekly sessions are supervised by Miss Thora Hoghaug and Miss Jesse Christensen.

Future Teachers of America

This group of Central students may some day return to the halls and rooms --not to learn from the classes but to help the classes learn. Under the direction of Miss Splittstoesser, the group gave various assistance during the year to the teacher, such as correcting papers, and supervising classes during their absences.

A pep fest staged before the Austin basketball game depicted the consequences of "a women's world" in relation to the manly task of coaching.

President Kay Beeman was elected to the state FTA board which drew up a charter for the clubs throughout the state. In the spring the organization attended the state-wide FTA convention held on the campus of St. Olaf college.

Edna Ferber and George Kaufman's broadway play "Stage Door" was presented as the all class play, November 12, at the Sheldon Memorial auditorium.

1953 In Review

Even though the Wingers failed to defend their Big Nine Championship successfully, they still finished out the season with a record of five wins, two losses, and one tie, as they copped third place in the conference.

The season was opened with Mankato in a game marred by fumbles and pass interceptions during the first three quarters. The Wingers scored a touchdown in each of the first three quarters, as the Scarlets countered their only touchdown in the third period.

The Wingers stayed on the winning road as they downed the Faribault Falcons 14 to 7 on September 18, in their second contest. Frequent fumbles again marred an otherwise perfectly played offensive game by both teams.

Red Wing's first defeat came at the hands of Austin as the Packers drubbed the Birds eighteen to seven. The Wingers, although outweighed at almost every position, were definitely not outfought as they rolled up 13 first downs to only 8 for Austin.

The team got back on the winning trail again on October 2, as they whipped Albert Lea, 31 to 19. Superior passing by Red Wing, as the outstanding point in the game, as the Birds started to score shortly after the kick-off and led all the way.

On October 9, the Wingers furnished plenty of Homecoming thrills as they tied league-leading Rochester, six to six. Both teams displayed strong lines in the evenly matched battle.

The Wingers lost their second game of the season on October 14, as they were soundly beaten by Winona, 42 to 19.

On October 30, Red Wing won its fourth game, downing Owatonna 30 to 7. The Wingers unleashed a terrific passing attack and a powerful running game in one of the most impressive victories of the season.

The Birds cinched third place on November sixth, when they beat Northfield 14 to 7. Again, the Wingers displayed a powerful ground game, and good passing in their fifth win of the season.

A Squad

The scene was no longer a dream, but a living reality as the defending Big Nine varsity basketball champions went into position on the new hardwood court to begin the 1953-54 season. Aggressiveness provided their reward at the Scarlet Feather deadline.

Lacking experience in early season competition in no way proved detrimental to the squad. As the season progressed the Wingers' versatility in all situations proved more than the opposing teams could handle.

The Wingers dropped only two games in twelve encounters and lost one of these in Big Nine competition. At this time the Birds were tied with Albert Lea for the second position in the Big Nine race.

HOMECOMING

QUEEN MARY ANN

With all eyes turned to the stage of the auditorium during the annual Thursday night pepfest, the Homecoming festivities of 1953 began as senior class president, Jerry Bodelson, crowned Queen Mary Ann Rapp and named as her attendants Joan Thompson and Val Jean Peterson. An alumnae tea, held in the library following the pepfest and a bonfire topped off Thursday's activities.

Just as Cinderella was transformed into a thing of beauty, so were clumsy trucks and hayracks, as the annual homecoming parade was staged through the streets of Red Wing on Friday afternoon. With its slogan pleading for a "Rise to Victory," homeroom 202 copped first prize in the float contest.

Attempting to "Take over on the ninth of October," an inspired Winger squad battled the Rochester Rockets to a 6-6 deadlock which climaxed the homecoming festivities.

Paul Storti's orchestra played for the dance held in the gymnasium after the game to end the 1953 Homecoming celebration.

Joan Thompson, Mary Ann Rapp, Val Jean Peterson.

It was a long walk for members of this home-room, but it was worth it for this novel float.

Four F. T. A. members put the finishing touches on their float before the parade begins.

CHORUS LINE: J. Magnuson, Loer, C. Eckblad, Hartley, Lind, Thompson, Sundahl, Downey, H. Magnuson, Swanson, McCusker, Mumford.

FEATHER FROLIC

Members of the cast of the skit, "A Dollar."

Concessions in the old gymnasium and a program in the new auditorium highlighted the annual Feather Frolic sponsored by the Scarlet Feather.

Dorothy Tousley and Jerry Strom were crowned queen and king and Cally Hartley and Noel Evans were named princess and prince over the annual affair.

Concluding the evenings festivities was a dance in the old gymnasium with music provided by Paul Storti's orchestra.

There was room for dancing?

Above: This is a study in dancing as seventh graders speculate on a "change of partners."

They were absent when the class pictures were taken, but here are Roger Wiuff, Phillip Hanson, Arnold Sanford, Wallace Pfingsten, Janet Boldt, Nancy Peterson, and Janet Watson.

Fun where you find it at the seventh grade party.

Central's students are being "stamped" upon entering one of the fall dances.

Junior and senior boys enjoy dancing.

This pleased look follows the 3:40 bell.

The Feather Editors take a dim view of the whole thing.

The mantoux test is interesting to Vere Vance as other students check with Nurse Stoland.

A pleasant smile for the cameraman in the Student Council decorated halls.

G. A. A. BANQUET

Nancy Bird presents gift to Senior GAA All Star, Betty Schaffer.

SENIOR ALL STARS: Riedell, McCusker, L. Puppe, Beeman, J. Magnuson, C. Eckblad, Schaffer, Thompson, Baggie, Sharon Longcor, Sandra Longcor, Marlene Sylvander, Ottem.

The advanced mechanical drawing class and its three members, Jim Johnson, Clint Johnson, and Ray Seeley.
